Course Description

The Diploma in Automobile Engineering is a one-year programme that gives learners the core knowledge and practical understanding needed to work in the automobile industry. It suits students who want a focused technical qualification, as well as people already working with vehicles who want to formalise and extend their skills.

The programme covers how vehicles are designed, built and tested, and how their main systems work together. Learners study the mechanics of machines, automotive chassis and vehicle dynamics, along with automotive pollution and its control. Supporting subjects in computer applications and management fundamentals prepare them for the tools and team responsibilities found in modern workshops and plants.

By the end of the course, learners understand the parts and working of different automobile systems and can apply that knowledge to inspection, diagnosis, servicing and quality roles across the automotive sector.
