COURSE DESCRIPTION

The Diploma in Computer Application (DCA) is a one-year program that gives learners a solid, practical foundation in computers and their everyday use in business and at work. It covers computer fundamentals together with widely used applications such as office software, internet applications, operating systems, database management systems and HTML.

Students then build more advanced skills in Java programming, principles of algorithms, soft computing, computer security and web designing. The curriculum is designed to make learners confident and technology-friendly within a short period, preparing them for roles such as computer operator, office assistant, data entry and MIS executive, junior programmer, web designer and IT support executive, or for further studies in computer applications.
