COURSE DESCRIPTION

The Diploma in Electrical Engineering is a one-year program that teaches students how electricity, electromagnetism and electronics are applied in the real world. Electricity has become an indispensable part of everyday life, powering homes, industries, transport and communication, and skilled electrical professionals are needed across every sector.

Students build a strong foundation in electrical engineering, engineering drawings, devices and circuits, basic electronics, electrical machines and circuit analysis, with an introduction to areas such as power, control systems and telecommunications. Designed for ITI and diploma holders with work experience, the program prepares graduates for roles such as electrical technician, maintenance technician, electrical supervisor and site electrician in power, manufacturing, construction and service industries.
